

INC

With wings expanded wide ourselves we'll rear,
And fly incumbent on the dusky air. Dryden.
Here the rebel giants lie;
And, when to move th' incumbent load they try,
Ascending vapours on the day prevail. Addisn.
Man is the destin'd prey of pestilence,
And o'er his guilty domes
She draws a close incumbent cloud of death. Thomson.
2. Imposed as a duty.
All men, truly zealous, will perform those good works that are incumbent on all Christians. Sprat's Sermons.
There is a double duty incumbent upon us in the exercise of our powers. L'Estrange.
Thus, if we think and act, we shall shew ourselves duly mindful not only of the advantages we receive from thence, but of the obligations also which are incumbent upon us. Atter.
INCUMBENT. n. f. [incumbens, Latin.] He who is in present possession of a benefice.
In many places the whole ecclesiastical dues are in lay hands, and the incumbent lieth at the mercy of his patron. Swift.
To INCUMBER. v. a. [encombrer, French.] To embarrass.
My cause is call'd, and that long look'd-for day
Is still incumber'd with some new delay. Dryden's Juven.
To INCUR. v. a. [incurro, Latin.] To become liable to a punishment or reprobation.
I have incurred displeasure from inferiours for giving way to the faults of others. Hayward.
They, not obeying,
Incur'd, what could they less? the penalty;
And manifold in sin, deserv'd to fall. Milton's Par. Lost.
So judge thou still, presumptuous! 'till the wrath,
Which thou incur'st by flying, meet thy flight
Sev'nfold, and scourge that wisdom back to hell. Milton.
They had a full persuasive that not to do it were to desert
God, and consequently to incur damnation. South.
2. To occur; to press on the senses.
The motions of the minute parts of bodies are invisible, and incur not to the eye; but yet they are to be deprehended by experience. Bacon's Natural History.
The mind of man, even in spirituals, acts with corporeal dependance; and so is he helped or hindered in its operations, according to the different quality of external objects that incur into the senses. South's Sermons.
INCURABILITY. n. f. [incurabilitas, Fr. from incurabile.] Impossibility of cure; utter insusceptibility of remedy.
We'll instantly open a door to the manner of a proper and improper consumption, together with the reason of the incurability of the former, and facile cure of the other. Harvey.
INCURABLE. adj. [incurable, Fr. in and curable.] Not admitting remedy; not to be removed by medicine; irremediable;
hopeless.
Pause not; for the present time's so fick,
That present medicine must be ministr'd,
Or overthrow incurable ensues. Shakef. King John.
Stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For being green, there is great hope of help. Shakef. H. VI.
A schirrus is not absolutely incurable, because it has been known that fresh pasture has cured it in cattle. Arbutnot.
If idiots and lunatics cannot be found, incurables may be taken into the hospital. Swift.
INCURABLENESS. n. f. [from incurable.] State of not admitting any cure.
INCURABLY. adv. [from incurable.] Without remedy.
We cannot know it is or is not, being incurably ignorant. Locke.
INCURIUS. adj. [in and curius.] Negligent; inattentive.
The Creator did not bestow so much skill upon his creatures,
to be looked upon with a careless incurius eye. Derham.
He seldom at the park appear'd;
Yet, not incurius, was inclin'd
To know the converse of mankind. Swift.
INCURSION. n. f. [from incurro, Latin.]
1. Attack; mischievous occurrence.
Sins of daily incurfion, and such as human frailty is unavoidably liable to. South's Sermons.
2. [Incurfion, Fr.] Invasion without conquest; inroad; ravage.
Spain is very weak at home, or very slow to move, when they suffer'd a small fleet of English to make an hostile invasion, or incurfion, upon their havens and roads. Bacon.
Now the Parthian king hath gather'd all his host Against the Scythian, whose incurfions wild
Have wasted Sogdiana. Milton's Parad. Regain'd.
The incurfions of the Goths disorder'd the affairs of the Roman empire. Arbutnot on Cæsar.
INCURVATION. n. f. [from incurvo, Latin.]
1. The act of bending or making crooked.
One part moving while the other rests, one would think, should cause an incurvation in the line. Glanv. See f.
2. Flexion of the body in token of reverence.
He made use of acts of worship which God hath appropriated; as incurvation, and sacrifice. Stillingfleet.

IND

To INCURVATE. v. a. [incurvo, Latin.] To bend; to crook.
Sir Isaac Newton has shewn, by several experiments of rays passing by the edges of bodies, that they are incurvated by the action of these bodies. Cheyne's Phil. Prin.
INCURVITY. n. f. [from incurvus, Latin.] Crookedness; the state of bending inward.
The incurvity of a dolphin must be taken not really, but in appearance, when they leap above water, and suddenly shoot down again: strait bodies, in a sudden motion, protruded obliquely downward, appear crooked. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
To INDAGATE. v. a. [indago, Latin.] To search; to beat out.
INDAGATION. n. f. [from indagate] Search; enquiry; examination.

truth requires to be searched into by such skillful indagators of nature. Boyle.
To INDART. v. a. [ir and dart.] To dart in; to strike in.
I'll look to like, if looking liking move;
But no more deep will I indart mine eye,
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly. Shakef.
To INDEBT. v. a.
1. To put into debt.
2. To oblige; to put under obligation.
INDEBTED. part cipal adj. [in and debt.] Obligated by something received; bound to restitution; having incurred a debt. It has to be before the person to whom the debt is due, and for before the thing received.
If the course of politick affairs cannot in any good course go forward without fit instruments, and that which fitteth them be their virtues, let polity acknowledge itself indebted to religion, godliness being the chiefest top and well-spring of all true virtues, even as God is of all good things. Hooker.
Forgive us our sins; for we forgive every one that is indebted to us. Lu. xi. 4.
He for himself
Indebted and undone, has nought to bring. Milton.
This blest alliance may
Th' indebted nation bounteously repay. Craville.
Few consider how much we are indebted to government, because few can represent how wretched mankind would be without it. Atterbury's Sermons.
Let us represent to our souls the love and beneficence for which we daily stand indebted to God. Rogers's Sermons.
We are wholly indebted for them to our ancestors. Swift.
INDECECY. n. f. [indecence, French.] Any thing unbecoming; any thing contrary to good manners; something wrong, but scarce criminal.
He will in vain endeavour to reform indececy in his pupil, which he allows in himself. Locke.
INDECENT. adj. [indecent, Fr. in and decent.] Unbecoming;
unfit for the eyes or ears.
'Till these men can prove these things, ordered by our church, to be either intrinsically unlawful or indecent, the use of them, as established amongst us, is necessary. South.
Characters, where obscene words were proper in their mouths, but very indecent to be heard. Dryden.
INDECENTLY. adv. [from indecent.] Without decency; in a manner contrary to decency.
INDECIDUOUS. adj. [in and deciduus.] Not falling; not shed.
We find the statue of the sun framed with rays about the head, which were the indeciduous and unshaken locks of Apollo. Brown's Vul. Err.
INDECLINABLE. adj. [indeclinable, Fr. indeclinabilis, Latin.]
Not varied by terminations.
Pondo is an indeclinable word, and when it is joined to numbers it signifies lib. a. Arbutnot.
INDECOROUS. adj. [indecorus, Latin.] Indecent; unbecoming.
What can be more indecorous than for a creature to violate the commands, and trample upon the authority of that awful excellence to whom he owes his life? Norris.
INDECORUM. n. f. [Latin.] Indecency; something unbecoming.
INDEED. adv. [in and deed.]
1. In reality; in truth; in verity.
Yet loving indeed, and therefore constant.
Though such assemblies be had indeed for religion's sake, hurtful nevertheless they may prove, as well in regard of their fitness to serve the turn of heretics, and such as privily will venture to taint their poison into new minds. Hooker.
Some, who have not deserved judgment of death, have been for their goods sake caught up and carried straight to the bough:
a thing indeed very pitiful and horrible. Spenser.
2. Above

IND

2. Above common rate.
Then didst thou utter, I am yours for ever;
'Tis grace indeed. Shakespeare.
Borrows, in mean affairs, his subjects pains;
But things of weight and consequence indeed,
Himself doth in his chamber them debate. Davies.
Such sons of Abraham, how highly soever they may have the luck to be thought of, are far from being Israelites indeed. South.
I were a beast, indeed, to do you wrong,
I who have lov'd and honour'd you so long. Dryden.
This is to be granted that. A particle of connection.
3. This limitation, indeed, of our author, will save those the labour who would look for Adam's heir amongst the race of brutes; but will very little contribute to the discovery of one next heir amongst men. Locke.
There is nothing in the world more generally dreaded, and yet less to be feared, than death: indeed, for those unhappy men whose hopes terminate in this life, no wonder if the prospect of another seems terrible and amazing. Wake.
It is used sometimes as a slight assertion or recapitulation in a sense hardly perceptible or explicable.
This is indeed more criminal in thee. Shakespeare.
I said I thought it was confederacy between the juggler and the two servants; tho' indeed I had no reason so to think. Bac.
Some sons indeed, some very few we see,
Who keep themselves from this infection free. Dryden.
There is indeed no greater pleasure in visiting these magazines of war, after one has seen two or three of them. Addisn.
5. It is used to note concession in comparisons.
Against these forces were prepared to the number of near one hundred ships; not so great of bulk indeed, but of a more nimble motion. Bacon's War with Spain.
INDEFTIGABLE. adj. [indefatigabilis, in and defatigo, Lat.]
Unwearied; not tired; not exhausted by labour.
Who shall spread his airy flight,
Upborne with indefatigable wings,
Over the vast abrupt. Milton.
The ambitious person must rise early and sit up late, and pursue his design with a constant indefatigable attendance: he must be infinitely patient and servile. South.
INDEFTIGABLY. adv. [from indefatigable.] Without weariness.
A man indefatigably zealous in the service of the church and state, and whose writings have highly deserved of both. Dryd.
INDEFTIBILITY. n. f. [from indefatigable.] The quality of suffering no decay; of being subject to no defect.
INDEFTIBLE. adj. [in and defictus, Lat.] Unfailing; not liable to defect or decay.
INDEFTISBLE. adj. [indefatigable, French.] Not to be cut off;
not to be vacated; irrevocable.
So indefatigable is our estate in those joys, that, if we do not sell it in reversion, we shall, when once invested, be beyond the possibility of ill husbandry. Decay of Piety.
INDEFTISBLE. adj. [in and defensum, Lat.] What cannot be defended or maintained.
As they extend the rule of consulting Scripture to all the actions of common life, even so far as to the taking up of a staff, so it is altogether false and indefatigable. Sanderfon.
INDEFINITE. adj. [indefinitus, Latin; indefinit, Fr.]
1. Not determined; not limited; not settled.
Though a position should be wholly rejected, yet that negative is more pregnant of direction than an indefinite; as athes are more generative than dust. Bacon's Essays.
Her advancement was left indefinite; but thus, that it should be as great as ever any former queen of England had. Bacon.
Tragedy and picture are more narrowly circumscribed by place and time than the epic poem: the time of this last is left indefinite. Dryden's Dufresnoy.
2. Large beyond the comprehension of man, though not absolutely without limits.
Though it is not infinite, it may be indefinite; though it is not boundless in itself, it may be so to human comprehension. Spektor.
INDEFINITELY. adv. [from indefinite.]
1. Without any settled or determinate limitation.
We observe that custom, whereunto St. Paul alludeth, and whereof the fathers of the church in their writings make often mention, to shew indefinitely what was done; but not universally to bind for ever all prayers unto one only fashion of utterance. Hooker.
We conceive no more than the letter beareth; that is, four times, or indefinitely more than thrice. Brown's Vulg. Err.
A duty to which all are indefinitely obliged, upon some occasions, by the express command of God. Smalridge.
2. To a degree indefinite.
If the world be indefinitely extended, that is, so far as no human intellect can fancy any bounds of it, then what we see must be the least part. Ray on the Creation.
INDEFINITUDE. n. f. [from indefinite.] Quantity not limited by our understanding, though yet finite.
They arise to a strange and prodigious multitude, if not in-

IND

definitude, by their various positions, combinations, and conjunctions. Have's Origin of Mankind.
INDELIBERATE. adj. [indeliberat, Fr. in and deliberate.] Un-INDELIBERATED. adj. [premeditated; done without consideration.
Actions proceeding from blandishments, or sweet persuasions, if they be indeliberated, as in children, who want the use of reason, are not presently free actions. Bramhall.
The love of God better can consist with the indeliberate commissions of many sins, than with an allowed penitence in any one. Gove nment of the Tongue.
INDELIBLE. adj. [indeleble, Fr. indelebilis, Lat. in and deleble.]
It should be written indeleble.
1. Not to be blotted out or effaced.

lible* characters the name and memory. King Charles.
Thy heedless sleeve will drink the colour'd oil,
And spot indeleble thy pocket foil. Gay's Trivia.
2. Not to be annulled.
All endued with indeleble power from above to feed, to govern this household, and to consecrate pastors and stewards of it to the world's end. Sprat's Sermons.
INDELICACY. n. f. [in and delicacy.] Want of delicacy; want of elegant decency.
Your papers would be chargeable with worse than indelicacy, they would be immoral, did you treat detestable uncleanness
as you rally an impertinent self-love. Addison.
INDELICATE. adj. [in and delicate.] Wanting decency; void of a quick sense of decency.
INDEMNIFICATION. n. f. [from indemnify.]

which may most fully remove all fears, and bury all jealousies in forgetfulness. King Charles.
To INDENT. v. a. [in and dens, a tooth, Lat.] To mark any thing with inequalities like a row of teeth; to cut in and out; to make to wave or undulate.
About his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head, nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlinked itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush. Shakespeare's As you like,
The serpent then, not with indented wave,
Prone on the ground, as since; but on his rear
Circular base of rising folds, that tower'd Fold above fold, a surging maze! Milton's Paradise Lost.
Trent, who, like some earth-born giant, spreads
His thirty arms along the indented meads. Milton.
The margins on each side do not terminate in a straight line, but are indented. Woodward.
To INDENT. v. n. [from the method of cutting counterparts of a contract together, that, laid on each other, they may fit, and any want of conformity may discover a fraud.] To contract; to bargain; to make a compact.
Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves? Shakef. H. IV.
He descends to the solemnity of a pact and covenant, and has indented with us. Decay of Piety.
INDENT. n. f. [from the verb.] Inequality; incisure; inden-tation.
Trent shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here. Shakef. Hen. IV.
INDENTATION. n. f. [in and dens, Latin.] An indenture;
waving in any figure.
The margins on each side do not terminate in a straight line, but are indented; each indentation being continued in a small ridge across the line, to the indentation that answers it on the opposite margin. Woodward on Possils.
INDENTURE. n. f. [from indent.] A covenant, so named because the counterparts are indented or cut one by the other.
